INVADE THREE MORE KWAJALEIN ISLANDS

The War Today...

By DeWitt MacKenzie
AP War Analyst

HITLER'S reported warning to the Pope that the Nazis intend to defend Rome step by step, irrespective of the destruction involved, tends to substantiate the idea that the Fuehrer may be preparing another of his colossal gambles—that the Allies won't go so far as to turn their guns on the city in order to oust the invaders.

I first called this possibility to your attention four months ago when the invasion of Italy was young. The question is, what happens if Hitler installs suicide divisions in Rome and invites the Allies to oust them? Obviously it can't be done without the use of force, unless we blockade the city and starve them out, and that means starving the civilian population as well.

That certainly would hand the Allies a hot tactical potato, but the Allied command has been dealing with a lot of hot potatoes successfully. The only official word we've had thus far is that capture of Rome is the objective of the present Italian offensive.

There's no apparent way of clearing Rome off the Nazis without causing damage to some of the world's most cherished monuments. Presumably by exercising extreme care Vatican City could be spared, but it would be a most unhappy position for the Pope and the other residents.

There's small doubt the Nazi anti-Christ is figuring on all this to help him hold the Eternal City if he should decide it's worth while. What devilry he's up to in urging the Pope to leave Rome for Germany isn't apparent. In any event his Holiness has declined to desert his post, come what may.

From the military standpoint, Rome is a strategic plum because it is hub of all the main railways of Italy, and the Allies must possess it if they wish to establish communications between North and South Italy. Into this strategic picture also enters the fact that Hitler's delaying action in Italy is providing a safeguard for his Balkan flank on the Adriatic. If he succeeds in Rome and withdraws all his troops into Northern Italy, he will enable the Allies to invade the Balkans across the Adriatic, or at least to move supplies and equipment freely to native forces there.

Of course, the question of how the Allies will handle the capture of Rome isn't a pressing one at the moment. We aren't in a position to make an assault on the city as yet, and the indications are that some very tough fighting will take place before we are at the gates of the city.

U. S. BOMBERS RAID PARIS AREA TODAY

Droves of Big American Planes Hit Targets in Central France

(By Associated Press)
LONDON, Feb. 5.—Droves of American heavy bombers thundered over Central France today and the Vichy radio said the southwestern district of Paris was one of the targets.

Lighter marauders and RAF fighter-bombers also hit secret German defense emplacements along the French invasion coast.

The Allied announcement of the day's operations, eight in nine days for American four-engine giants, said only that they attacked German airfields in Central France. The first bomber crews to return said they encountered few enemy fighters and only moderate gunfire.

The Americans last hit Paris Dec. 31 when Fortresses and Liberators combined in a bombing of ball-bearing plants in the industrial outskirts for the sixth American attack of the war on the French metropolis.

Paris last was touched by bombs on Jan. 14 when Typhoons swept the area.

Ninth Day of Assault

The assault carried the greatest sustained Allied aerial offensive of the war into its ninth day—a day and night battering at Germany and occupied territories which was kept rolling on through last night by RAF Mosquito blows at western Germany.

This fourth straight daylight assault by the American giant bombers, at airfields unspecified in preliminary announcement, appeared to be on an even greater scale than those which left great fires raging in Nazi U-boat bases and war industries at Wilhelmshaven and Frankfurt during the past two days.

Yesterday's blow at industrial Frankfurt was dealt by hundreds of escorted Flying Fortresses and Liberators at a cost of 21 bombers and one fighter. Twelve Nazi fighters were knocked down by the American gunners as their planes thundered through flaming fields of anti-aircraft fire protecting the vital industrial center.

Last night's Mosquito attacks against the unnamed targets in the western Reich were made without loss to the fast two-engine formations which lashed out while other night raiders were sowing mines in enemy waters.

On the main Fifth army front desperate fighting raged unabated in the streets of Cassino and in the mountains north of the town, with the Germans holding on despite sledgehammer attacks of American infantry, artillery and armor.

The Germans were still in possession of the main part of Cassino and were holding the Americans to the outskirts. Positions changed hands several times. The Germans even managed to get more six-barreled mortars, tanks and big self-propelled guns into Cassino for their desperate and almost suicidal defense of the city where they had turned almost every house into a fortress.

Just north of Cassino however, American troops pushed farther west, dislodging the Germans from most of Mt. Maiella, but desperate fighting was continuing.

Scouts of County Mark Anniversary

Boy Scout troops, Cub Packs, Sea Scouts and Air Scout squadrons of the Columbiana County Council, Boy Scouts of America, are taking part in the observance of the 34th anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America, Feb. 8-14.

The observances are taking the shape of Parents' Nights meetings, at which time the Scouts will demonstrate to their parents and friends many of the things they have learned in scouting; the decorating of display windows in the business section with scout materials including handcraft, camp equipment, and training materials. In certain sections of the council the Scouts are taking part in a "Gleaners after the Reapers" pledge campaign in the Fourth War Loan campaign.

On Feb. 13, in keeping with the 12th Scout law, "A Scout is Reverent," most of the troops will go to church services of their own choice, at which time many of the priests, rabbis and ministers will deliver sermons, designed to publicize the part that youth has in the future of America.

German Weapons Which Face Allied Invasion Forces

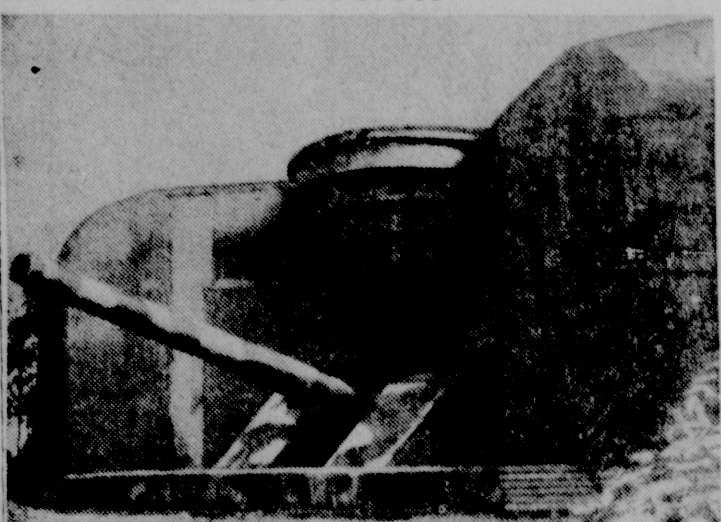

BIG COAST GUNS, of which this is a typical example, add to the deafening roar of battle as they blast at targets many miles off shore. The type here shown is good for a 10 to 15-mile range.

TURNED AGAINST Britain, these giant railway guns constantly threaten life and property across the channel. They made their first appearance early in the war when French resistance was collapsing.

In an 8,000-mile perimeter about his "Fortress Europe," Hitler has provided his huge defense forces with strategically located walls of concrete and steel. Our Allied leaders know well just what our invading forces face—and where! Whatever may or may not be the merits of the much-discussed giant rocket gun, any general check-up

ALTHOUGH BLOCK-BUSTERS find these huge concrete bastions a perfect target, Hitler uses them as a last ditch defense and in them are mounted the naval-type rifles pictured here.

ALONG THE ENEMY'S strongly protected coasts are thousands of these squat pill boxes from which anti-aircraft guns operate in revolving turrets. They are familiar to Allied flyers in visits to key coastal areas.

would include an assortment of ferro-concrete forts; gigantic guns; floating islands bristling with mines; barbed wire entanglements of ingenious construction—some electrically wired; and whatever may be left of the Luftwaffe, which many believe may show considerable strength in a crisis.

NAZIS LAUNCH NEW ATTACKS

British Report They Repulse Enemy At New Allied Beachhead

(By Associated Press)
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN ITALY, Feb. 5.—The Germans have launched a new attack in their determined offensive to smash the Allied beachhead, this time striking at British troops north of Aprilia 20 miles southeast of Rome, but have been repulsed with heavy losses, it was announced today.

On the main Fifth army front desperate fighting raged unabated in the streets of Cassino and in the mountains north of the town, with the Germans holding on despite sledgehammer attacks of American infantry, artillery and armor.

The Germans were still in possession of the main part of Cassino and were holding the Americans to the outskirts. Positions changed hands several times. Boom MacArthur, McCormick For Illinois G.O.P. Primary

(By Associated Press)
CHICAGO, Feb. 5.—The 1944 Republican presidential campaign entered a new phase today as organizations backing Col. Robert R. McCormick and Gen. Douglas MacArthur prepared to file petitions to place their names in the Illinois G.O.P. presidential preferential primary.

The name of Wendell Wilkie, 1940 Republican presidential nominee, also might be entered in the April 11 primary—the first in the country—with those of McCormick, editor and publisher of the Chicago Tribune, and MacArthur, southwest Pacific commander-in-chief.

Leaders of the groups supporting McCormick and MacArthur disclosed they would file petitions with the secretary of state at Springfield today, the opening day for such filings. The final day is Feb. 21 and candidates have until Feb. 26 to withdraw from the race personally.

Publishers Told Future Is Bright For Small Dailies

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, Feb. 5.—Meeting wartime problems will help daily newspapers attain new heights after hostilities end, an Ohio newspaper executive asserts.

W. W. Galvin, general manager of a chain of newspapers, told the Ohio Newspaper association yesterday the wartime production crisis has passed for the small daily and "there is no doubt it will survive despite critical manpower and newsprint shortages."

"We have learned to write better—to say more in less space—as the result of the paper shortage," said Galvin, who manages the Lima News, the Van Wert Times-Bulletin, the Wilmington News-Journal, the Washington Court House Record-Herald and the Logan Daily News.

"We have learned to utilize feminine labor to better advantage and we have managed to weather wartime problems," he added. "Because of this, dailies may expect to reach a zenith they never before have known after the war."

In a round-table discussion of the newsprint shortage Joseph K. Vodrey of the Canton Repository said he anticipated another cut in newsprint allotment for many papers. The discussion was conducted by C. B. Littick of the Zanesville Times-Recorder and the Zanesville Signal.

"I received a telegram from Congressman Clarence J. Brown of Blanchester," Vodrey reported, "in which he said newspapers using one hundred tons or less of newsprint per year were not scheduled for a cut in their allotment."

MECHANICS AT 6 PLANTS QUIT

Strike Spreads As WLB Order Is Defied By MESA Union Head

CLEVELAND, Feb. 5.—A walkout of approximately 13,000 employees affiliated with the Mechanics Educational Society of America closed six northern Ohio warplants and threatened to spread today after the union's leader, Matthew Smith, defied a War Labor board promise to invoke sanctions against the labor society unless production was resumed.

The WLB threatening action last night as more than 11,000 remained away from jobs in Cleveland and Toledo and 5,000 other MESA members continued stoppages in war-busy Detroit factories.

The board ordered MESA officers to appear at a Washington hearing Monday, but Smith, union secretary, replied executive board approval could not be voted by that time.

Jack Day, technical WLB disputes director, said Smith had issued the strike call in protest against National Labor Relations board procedure in a dispute involving the CIO United Automobile Workers. Day added Smith opposed a NLRB hearing scheduled at Toledo on request of the UAW which sought a bargaining agency election in a tool room of the Willys-Overland Motor Co. plant.

City Accepts New Fire Truck After Final Tests Friday

Passing the three-hour long series of tests conducted yesterday by board of control officials and the fire department, the new fire engine purchased last spring by the city and delivered here Monday has been accepted by the department, Safety Director C. E. Phillips announced today.

Confirmation of the results of the tests by the Ohio State Inspection bureau is all that remains for the 500-gallon Mack pumper to be officially added to the city's fire-fighting apparatus.

Fire Chief Vincent Malloy, city officials and representatives of the Mack-International Truck Co., were in charge of the trials held at the Salem Country club.

A series of three tests were run, during which 15-minute checks were recorded on nozzle pressure, inches of vacuum, pounds of pump pressure and number of engine revolutions per minute.

The pumper was run for two hours at 150-pound pressure, then for half an hour at 70 per cent of its capacity, 200 pounds pressure and for another half hour at 50 per cent of capacity, 250 pounds pump pressure.

Bricker Warns Of Threat To Freedom Of American Press

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, Feb. 5.—Freedom of the press is being threatened from three sides, says Gov. John W. Bricker.

In an address to the Ohio Newspaper association last night, he pictured the situation as a challenge to publishers and editors.

"The spirit of freedom today cries out for intelligent leadership from the press," he declared. "If that leadership falters, American liberty is in danger."

The governor, in a major speech of his campaign for the Republican presidential nomination, asserted press freedom was being jeopardized by "madness propaganda of the administration in power, . . . government censorship and . . . concentration of power in the hands of the executive branch of the government."

Bricker added that, to remove the hazards, "political propaganda must be destroyed as an instrumentality of government. We must insist that appropriate sources of information be kept open to the press of the country . . . news must be available and free to all alike as well as the right to print the news."

Proposing a free press throughout the world, Bricker commented "I have read Barriers Down," a presentation by Mr. Kent Cooper in regard to free dissemination of news around the world. I have followed the thinking of Dean Acheson and Mr. Hugh Baillie. It may be millennial to propose a world free press, but peace likewise may seem millennial. They with many of you are pioneers in this great cause is noble and the goal worthy. May those who think and strive for a better tomorrow be vigilant in a cause of a world free press."

Bricker declared the Roosevelt administration had made a "studied attempt to undermine the newspapers and radio."

"The New Deal is peculiarly resentful of honest criticism," he asserted. "Publishers, editors, correspondents and sports writers have been denounced."

Military Rule In Marshalls Is Proclaimed

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, Feb. 5.—Invading three more islands in big Kwajalein atoll, United States forces have overwhelmed the Japanese on two, pushed the resisting enemy back on a third which has seaplane bases, and brought two additional fortified bases under warship and plane attack.

Other important developments, as ascertained from latest advices of Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, were:

American leaders of the mid-Pacific offensive, foreseeing capture of all the mandated Marshalls, have proclaimed a military government to supplant the 25-year-long power of Emperor Hirohito in the areas as each is occupied.

There is no indication the huge American navy supporting the six-day-old invasion has been challenged or suffered losses.

The air force has kept Japanese planes out of the Marshalls skies for four successive days.

ROOF REPAIRS IN THE RAIN

Whatever may be the outcome of the soldier vote issue in congress, one result already has been registered in public opinion.

There has been no doubt in anyone's mind since the United States entered the war that millions of its citizens would leave the country to fight for it abroad. Throughout 1943, a year when congress marked time for weeks on end with no important legislative business to attend to, it was a certainty that millions of Americans would be abroad on war business in 1944, certainly in the Pacific area and probably in Europe.

Yet it was not until late in 1943 that a bill to give them a part in the 1944 national election was brought to the floor of the senate. Action was postponed until this year. Decision will be postponed still longer. Everything conceivable has been done to put off the question until it had to be settled under terrific pressure of time; it will be surprising if the final disposition of the question is not delayed till the ordinary mechanics of printing and distributing ballots cannot be performed properly.

Roof repairs in the rain are no better in matters like this than they are anywhere else. American citizens abroad and at home have been badly used by lemons; that is likely to be their principal conclusion the officials responsible for handling public problem on the controversial issue of how to conduct an election in wartime.

EQUALITY OF SACRIFICE

Wendell Wilkie's remarks in New York Times Hall about the fallacy of keeping up the American standard of living in wartime cannot be shrugged off as lightly as those who disagree with him would prefer.

Mr. Wilkie's direct application of his argument was to higher federal taxes to restrain the growth of national debt, but the same argument may be applied in other places, too.

At this moment, the country is grappling with the problem, for instance, of trying to meet organized labor's demands for an escalator wage scale that will enable its members to maintain a fixed standard of buying power.

This is only one of many symptoms of a wide widespread conviction among the people that pre-war standards should be maintained at any cost, by manipulations to create at least the illusion of being able to fight the costliest war in history without surrender of anything except luxuries—and there is even some dispute about giving them up, usually based on factitious arguments about the damage that might be done to morale.

Naturally, Americans are reluctant to approach the sacrifices of, say, the British, contending that the British are in a different situation because of their special circumstances. They have obeyed instinct in trying to retain as much as possible of the values they cherish, but it is Mr. Wilkie's argument that if we are going to save our standard of living in the future our standard of living today must be reduced. The alternative is to retain what we have through the expediency of deficit spending with the burden passed along to the future. "Thy should we be comfortable?" he asks, when there is no comfort in foxholes, no comfort in a flaming plane, no comfort in the sea, or in a Japanese prison camp.

There is no easy answer to that question. Mr. Wilkie, himself, does not answer it with his claim that at least 16 more billions should be taxed from the people, but it is more important at the moment that he has raised it. Equality of sacrifice is being ignored too widely for America's good, a fact grasped by those who are doing the sacrificing more readily than those of us who can still discuss sacrifice academically.

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, February 6

SUNDAY'S horoscope encourages a reasonable and well thought out plan to reach high places, particularly if competent equipment has attracted the attention and approbation of those superiors or employers in suitable places to further high objectives. But merit, skill, and logic should be the groundwork for this prestige. Big ideas and aims could gain by social or congenial factors. Entertain wisely.

Those whose birthday it is are encouraged to forge ahead to high objectives if they feel secure in the merit and soundness of their lofty ambitions. Reason and good judgment, with amiability, good feeling and social or romantic prestige may all combine to attract such forces. Use tact as well as certain reserves and poise for best results. Hospitality and grace also count.

A child born on this day may have many social, intellectual and worthy talents to attract the interest and rewards of those able to give valuable assistance in achieving a cherished career. There should be domestic joys as well.

For Monday, February 7

Monday's horoscope holding lunar aspects in the sign of service it would be well to cultivate this element of attention, especially where advancement and objectives depend upon the appreciation and good will of those in influential positions. There may be moderate success in either business, increased credit, promotion or other fair accomplishments, with shrewd and intuitive moves centered on the idea of reasonable and practical expansion. Be astute but ambitious.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be justified in counting on the support of those in influential positions in furthering their ambitious ends. But these should be moderate and efficiently developed if either public or private gain are hoped for. Policy, finesse, or cautious intrigues or well-laid strategies may be lucrative and enhance confidence, good will and personal gratifications.

A child born on this day may have many desirable traits of character and sound skills and efficiency to win assistance in a worthy career, from those in power or standing. Social and cultural assets may count for much.

CONVINCING DEMONSTRATION

Clearer demonstration ever staged of War Bonds bringing victory closer has been the successful operation in the Marshall Islands.

Overwhelming superiority in equipment crushed Japan's defense, with minimum loss of life and material for the attacking force. Judged by the communique, the Japanese simply were overwhelmed.

That was made possible by American war production, which in turn was made possible by money. Less than half the money was raised by taxes. The rest was raised by appealing to the people and their organizations for their savings; i. e., the money they spared for investment in victory.

Victory, in turn, secures the investment. Each fresh military success makes the people's War Bonds safer. Each War Bond helps military success by providing the financial wherewithal to furnish the material and stabilize the nation so the material will keep coming.

To the list of things accomplished in the Marshalls should be added: Proof that overwhelming striking force made possible by War Bonds is the secret of success in the United States war effort.

When it comes to the vastly important and tragic business of war we shut our eyes and stop our ears until it is so late that top management has to perform miracles, and men die waiting for them.—WPB Vice President Charles E. Wilson.

The Nazi leaders are apparently unwilling to face the test of going to the public for their war loans—they can't do that. Our people can.—OWI Director Elmer Davis.

If it is all right to draft a man to fire a gun, then it is just as right to draft the men to make the gun for him.—Warren H. Atherton, American Legion national commander.

Some of the extension of federal power is beneficial from every standpoint. Too much is destructive of self-direction. Social salvation will not be attained by turning over activity to a vast impersonal machine in Washington.—Arthur A. Ballantine, former under-secretary of the treasury.

We had better overestimate the time it is going to take to defeat Germany than to underestimate it.—Navy Secretary Frank Knox.

God grants liberty only to those who love it, and are always ready to guard and defend it.—Daniel Webster.

One bad general is better than two good ones.—French Proverb.

The maid-servant, the sailor and the schoolboy are the three beings that enjoy a holiday beyond all the rest of the world.—Leigh Hunt.

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

Doctor's Readers Express Themselves

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
I HAVE MANY pertinent remarks from my readers that I think should be given publicity. So from time to time I will run a column giving them free rein.

Milk—My remarks on milk drew considerable protest. I said, you remember, that I thought milk was a very healthy drink and good for those who took it, but that I didn't like it and had lived 37 years after I gave it up in good health, and quoted Dr. Soper, of St. Louis, who said man is the only animal who continues to drink milk after infancy and has paid for that with a host of diseases.

A reader, Dr. L. T. Dunaway, of Eldorado Springs, Missouri, contributes this verse on the subject: "The cow drinks water by the pond. And at eighteen she is done. The cat in gravy daily soaks. And then in twelve short years she croaks. The modest, sober dame dry hen. Lay eggs for 'noggies' and dies at ten. All animals are strictly dry. They sinless live and swiftly die. But sinful, sinful milk soaked men. Survive for three score years and ten."

And some of us though mighty few. Stay lively till we're ninety-two." (Dr. Dunaway does not claim originality for this outburst, but neither he nor I know the author.)

Doctor Discusses Milk
Mr. Karl H. Starkweather, of Plymouth, Michigan, writes: "It is beyond me how there can be some people who do not enjoy milk. On Christmas I arrived at the age of 54. I have drunk milk in quantity as far back as my recollection goes and am still doing it. In my opinion it is the very finest drink that I am. I expect to keep doing it for another 40 years. My wife, however, is one of those people who doesn't drink it. In thirty years of married life I never saw her drink a glass of milk."

In this connection The Pet Milk Company, of St. Louis, ask me to make a correction which I am glad to do.

"In discussing milk in your column you say—'Evaporated milk is clean, but expensive.'"

"Evaporated milk, far from being expensive, is much cheaper in all cities, and indeed in most places, than plain pasteurized milk. There are few cities in the country today in which plain pasteurized milk can be bought for less than 14 to 17 cents a quart. Evaporated milk is widely sold now at 9 cents per tall can containing a total of 14½ ounces of double-rich evaporated milk. This is equivalent to about four-fifths of a quart of bottled milk."

Young People's Clothes Habits
Mrs. C. D. Wheelock, of Washington, D. C., wants to know—"Now that cold weather is here and the bare-headed vogue for young people still exists what can we do about it? It seems so foolish for the young boys, especially not having the quantity of hair the girls do, to suffer through wintry blasts just because 'nobody wears a hat.' Especially just after getting over a cold is it not dangerous? I am concerned about their ears chiefly."

Along the same lines a lady from Detroit is again bare legs. "Can't you draft a letter to go to the principals of all high schools, telling of the dangers of girls going around with bare legs in winter weather? It must be bad for their health, anyway. It is ugly. Mary Martin is the only woman who has a right to exhibit bare legs in a snowdrift. I have heard there is no temperature sensation in the legs. Is that true? But, my goodness, think of the chapped skin."

Comment by Logan Clendingen—It is true that there are very few temperature-sensing nerve ends in the skin of the legs. You can tell that in the bath tub when your knees get ice cold, but you don't realize it.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Reader:—What causes color blindness? Is it due to lack of Vitamin A? Can it be cured? I want to know soon so I can enter the armed forces.
Answer: Color blindness is an hereditary defect of the retina of the eye. Vitamin A has no effect on it. It can not be cured. It does not prevent service in most branches of the armed forces.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendingen has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendingen, 235 E. 45th st., New York. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

NOTHING TOO ROUGH FOR ARMY CHAPLAIN

CAMP CAMPBELL, Ky.—When the 20th Armored division goes roughing it—which is often—Lieut. Gabriel Ginascol, its chaplain, goes roughing along too.

Maybe the men ride in tanks or trucks. Their chaplain is right along with them on a motorcycle. On a bivouac, Chaplain Ginascol spreads his shelter and half on the ground with the men.

He too digs fox holes. And he knows tanks inside out, for he has helped repair and drive them.

"I've got to gain the confidence of the men," says the Bostonian. "If I show I am aware of their problems through actual experience my advice to them becomes real, religion more significant."

ITS IN THE AIR. You can feel it, every time the Axis is struck. This is the climax year, the year of decision.

In history, 1944 will be the big year of the war—every stroke for victory counts more now. That's why it's vitally important for every American to beat his post, doing his part right now.

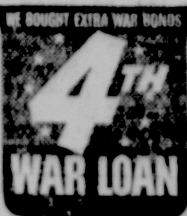

You, personally, have an important job in winning the war—buying War Bonds. It's not glamorous—no, not even a sacrifice, really, because you are only lending your money, to be returned with interest. But it is essential to complete victory.

Your part in this year of decision is at least one extra $100 Bond, above your regular Bond buying. That is your minimum individual quota. But don't stop there. Remember wars are won only by all-out effort. So buy $200, $300, $500 worth—buy more than you can afford. And buy your Bonds where you work—at the plant or at the office.

Your country is counting on you—let's make the year of decision OUR year!

THE LITTLE DOG BARKED

by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

Only Linwood was near the sheriff. Herb Weymouth was his name. Linwood had apparently been the spokesman so far, and was leaning in the opposite side of the shattering booth, beret, gloves and all. "So you're the one who called me," the sheriff addressed me after Linwood had performed the introductions, looking me over from head to foot, and then transferring his scrutiny to Linda with: "And you're the one who got killed."

We both nodded and said, yes, we were.

"Well, glad you made 'em and glad you're alive. Wished I hadn't even in the middle of cutting my ears for the cannery when it happened, but that can't be helped."

deviated, and then drew through his nose, in his direction. "Why you think it wasn't no accident, this hear heavy telephone booth falling down?"

"You can see for yourself the way it cut," I said.

"I can see it. But what a look to see was it cut?"

ent with the question changed my judgment, made me sense the kindness and shrewdness behind the complacency and the twang. And suddenly all my suspicions melted out of me in quick, coherent words.

"A lot of things. Talk I'd overheard about 'sabotaging,' that is, pulling my play. Mr. Colby will bar me out. And they put Miss Barolle and me in the doghouse. That's what they call the old inn at the end of the cove, and it isn't fit to live in and they sent a man here in the night, in the middle of the storm, to frighten us with plans and groans, playing ghost. We saw him get out of a window and run away. Mr. Linwood won't believe it and says it was a tree. But it was a man. It's all part of a plot. Some of the Fern Cove stockholders don't want my play tried out here because of a personal grudge against my collaborator and—"

"Whoa!" interrupted the Sheriff, with a fleeting grin. "One thing at a time! You ain't no runaway now. Now let's sort it all out, and of this young lady'n you seen a man climb outen a window last night, you say. Maybe he was a thief. Miss anything?"

"He wasn't a thief," Linda was speaking over. "He was there to—to Mrs. Turner thinks, to frighten us away. But I believe he was sent there to kill me—us—just as someone tried to kill me today with that booth. And he became scared when he heard us talking. Only I don't know why he made so much noise, throwing things around and groaning," she concluded, as if the anomaly had only just occurred to her.

"Throwing things? I thought he was moaned." The sheriff stroked his chin pensively.

"I only heard him moan," I said truthfully.

And Linda explained: "The pumping and throwing was before called Mrs. Turner. I heard it, because it was right under my room. No under the room next to mine. The man got out of the second window left of the entrance, and mine was the third."

Sheriff Weymouth said nothing at all for quite a time, in which he and Constable Corey held a lively conversation in glances only. They decided: "I'm going over to that there 'doghouse.' Maybe they're something there might be a clue. You people stay here till I get back. Expecting one, to guide us. Which of you was it phoned me? You—Mr. Colby's the name? Okay. You come and show Ed'n me the way."

The sheriff seemed to be gone a long time. Fifteen, twenty minutes went by—half an hour....

No one spoke. We had dispersed and were sitting alone in morose groups. Orne Paulsen, Linda and I were a bench together. Bill Parris leaning against the wall near by, the others on scattered chairs.

Linwood alone was moving. Pacing up and down and scowling furiously each time he passed the offending telephone booth.

And then the sheriff was back. Without a trace of complacency left. With a solemn, stern look in his old eyes.

The constable wasn't with him. Only Wells Colby. And he looked grim, green in the face, as if he'd been sick, or was going to be, any minute.

"I'm sure glad you had the brains to see all them shenanigans wasn't so innocent. Thank you for asking 'em out me, Mrs. Turner," the sheriff addressed me with a queer catch in his voice. "Without me doing that, and then putting a flea in my ear made me go over to this here old inn, a friend of mine would have lain unbathed for weeks maybe. Ayah, that's what I mean," he nodded in answer to the startled glances around him.

"Mrs. Turner and the other young lady sure saw a man run away: a wanderer. Them groans and moans I heard warn't no play-acting and ghost-playing, but a murdered man dying." He swallowed hard. I could see his Adam's apple jump up and down twice in his lean neck.

"Sorry, Guess a sheriff shouldn't chatter be human, but—hit me hard. Will not sound so good to some of you either, seeing you all know the murdered man. Mack Tucker—old Mack, everybody called him. He's lying dead in that downstairs room over there, with his head bashed in on the andirons. Ed Corey's guarding the corpse for me. I can get the coroner."

I felt ice-cold and sick—as sick as Wells Colby looked—could hardly hear what the sheriff was saying.

"Murder and attempted murder. That's what been happening here. And I don't like it. Had nothing

Yanks At Anzio Beachhead Realize Grim Fight Ahead

By DANIEL DELUCE
Associated Press War Correspondent
Representing the Combined American Press

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY ON THE ANZIO BEACHHEAD IN ITALY, Feb. 2—(Delayed)—Is the fateful pattern of Salerno being repeated on this wide but shallow beachhead within sight of Rome's radio towers.

The tempo of British-American operations at the southern coastal approaches to the Eternal City has been slower than the Fifth Army's invasion south of Naples last September.

Although in 12 days ashore our seaborne forces have entrenched themselves strongly in the flat farmlands, on a beachhead more than 14 miles wide and extending eight miles from the sea, the enemy retains control of the dominant high ground and the main Rome highway through Cisterna.

Most of this sizable beachhead was seized in the face of meager resistance from surprised scattered German forces. "This is nothing like Salerno," the veteran American infantry grinned then, mopping up small squads of the enemy in the first easy days.

But now the grim, determined doughboy tells you, "It's worse than Salerno."

Enemy Masses Troops

What the situation boils down to is this:

At Cisterna, where heavy Allied air and naval support helped break a German counter-offensive within one week, the Germans have had 12 days to mass their troops for what, according to officially released information, will turn into a furious effort to wipe out the entire Allied foothold around Anzio.

Until the beachhead had passed this critical test, it can not be described as a military success.

The action at Cisterna last Sunday, when American shock troops gallantly attacked but fell short of capturing this "town of a thousand pillboxes," marked a new and bitter phase.

German resistance is strong at every point of the beachhead perimeter, and increasing counter-attacks indicate it is the enemy's ambition to wrest and exploit the initiative.

The Luftwaffe has not been strong enough to effective challenge Allied air superiority, but it has inflicted some damage and now is harrying the forward Allied troops. Long-range enemy guns still are capable of lobbing shells into the vicinity of Anzio, itself.

Lost 200 Planes

One source estimated today the Luftwaffe lost 200 planes in the early attempts to knock out Anzio as an invasion port.

Despite reinforcements of anti-aircraft guns and the almost constant pressure of Allied fighter-patrols over the beachhead, a formation of 25 German planes bombed and strafed Allied troops and vehicles this afternoon.

Weather permitting, however, the Allied air forces can deal out ten or twenty-fold the punishment inflicted by the Luftwaffe. This massive Allied air strength, together with Allied warships close offshore are among the factors which have convinced ground troops here that the beachhead not only will be held, but will be strategically expanded.

Enemy concentrations and artillery on the northern flank. However, already have taken on such imposing size that this support can be quickly stepped up in case of emergency.

"Too Little, Too Early?"

Fighting men here are acutely aware that the public in the United States and Great Britain may already be expressing chagrin that 12 days have not been enough for them to march some 35 miles from Anzio to Rome and that military second-guessers may be referring to the amphibious attack as "too little, too early."

But the payoff on this campaign will be whether the Allies capture Rome. The chance was taken and the divisions were risked. Some of the most experienced elements of the German army bar the way.

There's no rosy optimism among the Allied forces of the Anzio beachhead. There's a solid conviction, however, that the Germans—regardless of how hard and desperately they may fight—will ultimately be forced into another "advance to the rear."

WE WORK FOR VICTORY TOO! WE LOOK ALL-WAYS BEFORE CROSSING

Importance of looking all ways at intersections before crossing the street, being especially alert for turning cars, is emphasized in the AAA-GSAA school safety poster for February being distributed to schools by the Columbiana County Motor club.

Though traffic fatalities dropped last year from a total of 28,200 in 1942 to approximately 24,000 in 1943, pedestrian fatalities did not drop in proportion, according to A. P. Morris, manager of the club.

"Last year, pedestrian fatalities were nearly one-half of the traffic fatalities in the country," he said. "For several years before the war started, pedestrian fatalities constituted about two-fifths of all fatalities, but the greater amount of walking, especially at night, and unfamiliarity of both children and adults with new surrounding caused by war plant employment, has raised the ratio of pedestrian to non-pedestrian fatalities."

"The new poster is one of the AAA-GSAA WE WORK FOR VICTORY, TOO series of posters presented this year by the club as part of its civic safety program. Each poster pictures children making their own contribution to the war effort, at the same time practicing a safe walking rule. Thousands of children, as depicted in the poster, have been engaged in the collection of scrap, waste paper, etc."

Household Hints

By ELEANOR ROSS

We have on hand many requests for information on the care and cleaning of various household items. Information, which we hope, may be of interest to other readers. The first request is for the cleaning of brass and copper, two materials that we regard with reverence now. Grandma used to like a mixture of vinegar and salt to clean copper and brass, other than cooking utensils in her household.

Since the request is for a cleaning paste that may be put up at home, we give it here. Dissolve 1/2 cup soap flakes in one pint of hot water and let the solution cool. Beat in 3 tablespoons whitening and 2 tablespoons acid (vinegar) will do. Put in covered jar and keep ready for use. Should the mixture separate, shake it before using. This paste may be applied with a wad of cotton waste, obtainable at a paint store. We find it better to use cotton waste than to use good polishing cloths for this application.

Cleaning Iron Utensils. Iron, steel, tin and nickel all belong to the same family. They are all of an iron nature whether they are a covering, as tin and nickel are, or whether they are in their pure state like wrought iron or sheet iron. Steel is iron tempered and polished. All equipment of this kind must have care to prevent rust. A rusty pan allowed to stand in a white enamel sink will leave its mark. Wrought iron, for example, iron andirons and flower racks, can be kept in fine condition by rubbing over occasionally with a cloth moistened with kerosene or light oil. Nickel is a metal that really needs care, and that care consists in keeping it as dry as possible.

Washing Nickel Fixtures. Nickel faucets will hold their brightness well if not scoured with gritty cleaners. Modern powder is so composed that it requires little cleaning care. To clean, use soap and water, then a hot rinse and a good wipe will be all that is needed. The old pewter darkened because of its lead content and when once dark it was impossible to brighten without expert treatment. For this pewter, clean with a paste of whitening and water. In extreme cases, fine pumice or rottenstone may be mixed with the whitening and water. Tin utensils have a thin coating of tin on an iron foundation, and give excellent service if they are thorguards one of the main channels into Kwajalein lagoon now used by the American navy and is heavily fortified.

U. S. Losses Moderate

Admiral Nimitz's communiqué last night said "operations at Kwajalein atoll continue satisfactorily" and "our casualties continue to be moderate."

Earlier, Admiral Nimitz issued a proclamation to the people of the Marshalls — "Polynesians estimated in 1935 to total slightly more than 9,000—"suspending the powers of the emperor of Japan in the occupied areas."

The proclamation, signed by Admiral Nimitz as "military governor of the Marshall Islands," specified: "It has become necessary for the United States armed forces to occupy this and other islands of the Marshall Islands."

Marshall inhabitants are to be permitted to continue normal occupations "so far as war necessities and their own behavior permit."

Admiral Nimitz assumes government and jurisdictional powers, to be exercised through subordinate commanders.

Military Welcome Given Crew of "Hell's Angels"

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 5 — A full-dress military welcome was accorded six ground crew members whose fortress "Hell's Angels" set an Eighth Air force record with 50 perfect raid flights over Hitler's Europe.

Sgt. Fabian S. Folmer of Mansfield, O., was a member of the monkeywrench staff which kept the flying warrior in such good condition that never once did it return with a wounded airman and only once in all its missions was it forced to turn back.

The six men will get 30-day furloughs, after which they'll reassemble for a tour of the nation's war plants.

PUBLISHERS

"This means but one thing to me," the Canton newspaperman commented, "newspapers using more than one hundred tons may expect a cut."

Vodrey also informed the association's convention he had heard from the War Production board that American mills were ordered to reduce newspaper production 22 per cent under their quota and that the mills were reducing allotment of newspapers buying from them by 22 per cent.

Cities Post-War Field

Glenn L. Cox of the Dayton Daily News said most newspapers could increase their circulation rates without noticeable loss of subscribers but warned against "dissipation of profits that would accrue from the increase in innumerable features in the post-war era."

Gordon K. Bush of the Athens Messenger urged publishers to exploit the possibilities of classified advertising as a major source of revenue.

Raymond Fletcher of the Portsmouth Times urged advertising departments to make every effort to offset any advertising loss.

Republicans List 1,059 Delegates and Democrats 1,176 To Party Conventions

How many delegates will go to the Republican national convention in June? How many to the Democratic national convention? How many will there be from Ohio, California, Idaho, the District of Columbia? How are delegates apportioned?

To satisfy inquiries we publish herewith a table of delegations, subject to correction if either party finds reason for revision.

The Republican convention will have 1,059 delegates, the Democratic convention 1,176. The Republican roll includes four delegates-at-large for each state, two additional delegates at large for each representative-at-large in congress from each state, three additional delegates-at-large from each state casting its electoral vote for the Republican nominee in the last presidential election or electing a Republican senator in the next succeeding election.

Each congressional district is entitled to one delegate if it has cast 1,000 Republican votes in the preceding presidential or congressional election, two delegates if it has cast 10,000 Republican votes. Ohio will have six delegates-at-large and two from each of its 22 congressional districts—a total of 50—in the Republican convention.

The Democratic convention will have its usual state quotas of two delegates for each senator and representative in congress. In addition, each state that went Democratic in 1940 is entitled to two additional delegates-at-large. Ohio will have 50 delegates as its state quota, plus a bonus of two for being in the Democratic column in 1940.

Conventions of both parties include delegates representing the District of Columbia, Alaska and Island territories.

McCulloch's

McCULLOCH'S REPRINTS H. I. PHILLIPS' "WAR BOND SALESPPOINT" FROM THE JANUARY 17th NEW YORK SUN:

I'm buying a bond for a freckled kid
Who lived down the street away—
A boy with a dog just a while ago—
A name on a list today! . . .
I'm buying a bond for a barefoot lad
Who only a short time back
Was romping the fields of the old home town,
But died in a far attack!

I'm coming across in the memory
Of youngsters who left the town
With laughter and jokes and their heads held high
To take on the scrappers' frown;
The kids who were down in the swimmin' hole
Or played in the High School show—
The boys who'd be out on the sandlots now . . .
Except that it can't be so!

I'm signing for all I can take aboard;
I thought I had done my share
Until in the home town sheet today
I saw "Johnny Adams" there;
He'd brought me my papers every night,
A child on a bike bright red;
He's riding the path to the house right now,
I thought . . . but the lad is dead!

I've read all the ads in the War Bond drive,
The work of the writers slick;
But, God, when I think that it takes that stuff
It leaves me a little sick;
The picture of boys on a village green
Or trooping across the mead
Who now lie under a cross-filled field
Is all that we ought to need.

I listen to speeches o'er mikes galore
That tell of the War Bond drive,
But all I hear is the cannon's roar—
The whine of a power-diver;
The speeches, the music, the ballyhoo—
All leave me a little cold . . .
For I know a boy who just died for me—
And couldn't be quite that old!

A duty? A noble and handsome act,
This taking of Bonds? Bunk!
Since when was investment on sure things
A sacrifice? Scrap such junk! . . .
I'm doing a painless and little thing . . .
One sales point alone rings true!
My debt to those lads from the old home town,
Who, asked for their lives, CAME THROUGH!
